Elden Ring [March-2022]

- "I'm amazed by the atmosphere and themes of the game. And the game itself is quite fun, thankfully. I wonder if it was originally set in the dawn of time, would this game change at all? That would be interesting." - Feedees - "The pace is nice and fast, as you fight off waves of enemies. The set of rogues in the beginning were a bit hard to avoid, but quickly made my character a lot easier to deal with. The character development is great and it's a pleasure to use the fast paced combat." - PepeWes - "There's a nice tempo to the battles as well as an intuitive control system. It's not a great game as a whole, as it is an incomplete game with many missing quests and DLC (...). In addition, the combat is choppy, making any combat style a bit awkward." - JaeOnGames - "The use of different animations and tones to the different types of attacks in combat is great and one of the things I really love about this game. It's really a joy to play and I can't wait for the new DLC!" - NoMadCaine - "I really love how this game makes you feel like you're already a hero, instantly. None of that hesitation, you know you're the hero, you feel empowered, and you want to save everybody." - Egregious - "This game, is so much fun, I can't even begin to explain it. The combat is so tight, and the combat system really helps to make the game more interesting, since each decision you make has an immediate impact on the battle itself, changing the composition and style of the enemies, which, in turn, change the battlefield and how the player/gamelogic interacts with the environment." - TheTattooCow New / Coming Developer Platforms Game Modes Gameplay RPG Online 3D 10/15/2018 - Games: 486 1/21/2019 - RPG Guides: 61 1/21/2019 - Fansites: 19 1/21/2019 - Images: 1356 Wiki: About Tarnished: The Lands Between is set on a world that is deeply linked to a myth passed down through generations, a myth that has shaped the destiny of each bff6bb2d33

1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to the transmission of messages, and in particular to the transmission of advertisement messages. 2. Description of the Prior Art Advertisers often advertise their products by placing an advertisement in newspapers, magazines or a local broadcasting system. Of course, this requires that the advertiser deposit money to the newspaper or magazine, or cable television company to have the advertisement broadcast. Often, however, a particular advertisement or message is directed to a particular group of people, such as the customers of a particular store. In such cases, it would be much more effective to broadcast the advertisement to that particular group of customers. However, to date, it has been much too expensive and time consuming to have a person dedicate enough time to generate and broadcast a group advertisement to a desired audience. To this date, it has been either too expensive for an advertiser to have a person dedicated to creating group advertisements or to broadcast group advertisements, or if the advertiser elected to have a person dedicate enough time, the size of the audience for a single advertisement is simply too small to make the cost worthwhile. In the past, some advertisers have attempted to broadcast advertisements to a group of recipients by broadcasting to a television station which then retransmits the advertisements to subscribers. Such a broadcasting approach is, however, limited by the time-exclusivity between a group of television channels, the amount of content that can be transmitted simultaneously in a television broadcast, and the amounts of advertising time that are available for on-air use. In some cases, such a broadcasting method fails to deliver its message at all because the audience tuned to a particular group of channels is simply too small. In other cases, the message is delivered, but it is too late to have a commercial effect, and the message is repeated many times because each time that the message is delivered, the viewing audience grows smaller. Broadcasting group messages to large audiences is also limited by the number of television stations which carry the broadcast. If a television station carries a broadcast, it does not stop carrying it until all of the viewing audience has seen the message, even if the message is no longer needed. This causes a viewing audience to grow larger and larger, and it could begin to dominate other programming, thereby reducing the viewers' desire to view

Giving this guy something in credit can be daunting. I'd be happy to give 10-15 minutes of my time, but I'm quite picky when it comes to what I'm willing to overlook. Or maybe I'd overlook someone who isn't interested in how to get things done either.
