[Metabolic disorders in chronic liver disease]. Metabolic complications of chronic liver disease are a consequence of hepatic dysfunction and hepatic iron accumulation. These changes occur in more than 40% of patients with chronic liver disease and are associated with insulin resistance, cardiovascular abnormalities, altered gut hormone metabolism and with reduced quality of life. Epidemiological studies have been performed in the world to assess the current prevalence and predictors of metabolic abnormalities in patients with chronic liver disease. Metabolic complications are observed in patients with cirrhosis, but their prevalence is higher in patients with chronic hepatitis. Diet, weight loss and regular exercise can prevent or delay the progression of cirrhosis. However, pharmacological therapy can be used as well in the management of patients with cirrhosis. Currently a perennial GOP favorite to win the Oval Office, Ron Paul's principal hope is for a bid that doesn't proceed, something all but conceded in the harsh critique of the Dr. No bid by a high-ranking Republican, The New York Times' Michael Shear reports.
